Anecdotes of Robbins.
Wilson's Mills, Dec. 30th, 1890.
As it was in this part of the country that Robbins lived when the murder was committed, I was taking the liberty to jot down a few anecdotes. He cleared and lived on the farm occupied by the late John Bennett, and the traces of his buildings can be plainly seen. His house stood on the bank of the Diamond, just a short distance from the old ford way. The best of the country was his.

HOUSEKEEPER.
Lemon and vanilla mixed make the best of flavoring. To one teaspoon of lemon add one-third as much vanilla.
A little salt added to the white of an egg will make it beat easier and it will be stiffer.
To clean willow furniture apply salt and water with a brush and dry thoroughly.
To remove ink from a carpet apply dry salt immediately, knead off the ink, and wash out with water.

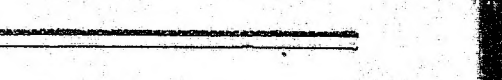

OXFORD COUNTY ADVERTISER, FRIDAY, JANUARY 16, 1891.

Horses in Old Buckfield.
It is exceedingly doubtful if there is another town of equal size in all New England where so many fine horses are bred and raised as in this good old town of Buckfield. The average of the week and during that time trotting horses have been flying past my window every hour in the day. And fine horses they are, with records ranging away down in the twenties. There are two noted breeders in the town. Mr. Robinson, Dean and his wife, and Mr. Robinson, Dean and his wife.

A Maine Landlord at Washington.
Elmer F. Woodbury, Proprietor of Hotel Normandie-Sketch of His Brilliant Career.
Elmer F. Woodbury, the proprietor of the Hotel Normandie, Washington, D. C., in his youth resided with his grandfather in South Paris, Me., who was one of the most widely known and popular tavern-keepers in the old Pine State. Although quite young at present, Mr. Woodbury was old enough at the period referred to to note the condition of the shaped stick, the usefulness of which you will see later on.

"It took some time for us to reach our position, and there we remained two hours 'culling' but had no answer. At the end of this time we decided to go back to our starting place and take our position at the mouth of the Algonquin River, a small stream emptying into the lake. This we did, and after 'culling' an hour got an answer. How my blood thrilled at the faint 'woof' of the ball mouse coming on by my ears from far away. It was at least seven miles, the

LIVE STOCK MATTERS.
SOME REMEDIES FOR INTERFERING FEET IN HORSES.
What the Veterinary Writers Say About It—Their Knowledge Not Too Often—Young Horses Interfere When They Are Tired and Out of Condition.

LIVE STOCK MATTERS.
In turning to our text books we find in this as in many other cases, only the most meagre notices.
We think the most valuable notices are those of the old writers, such as, e. g., in Professor Williams' in many respects excellent work on veterinary surgery he mentions the matter, with the following description or cutting is caused by the loss of one foot striking against the fetlock. Generally it is the hind limbs that suffer, but not always.

LIVE STOCK MATTERS.
Young horses out of condition often do this when they are tired and exhausted. They must be shod with preventive shoes. When horses have been shod with a front they are very apt to tread themselves and sometimes, very severely, causing extreme lameness.

LIVE STOCK MATTERS.
Older writers like Youatt have been a great deal further, and describe it under the name of "interfering." Mr. Youatt says that the fetlock is often bruised by the shoe or the hoof of the opposite foot. Mr. Youatt also says that the fetlock is often bruised by the shoe or the hoof of the opposite foot.

LIVE STOCK MATTERS.
The most successful remedy, and that which in the majority of cases succeeds in all others, is to put on a shoe of equal thickness from heel to toe, and having but one nail, and that near the toe on the inside of the shoe, care being taken that the shoe will not be too tight.
